On Friday evening, March 21, there was a meeting of the Graduate Club.

Mrs. Alice Meynell, an English editor, essayist and poet of distinction, lectured in College Hall Chapel on last Monday afternoon, March 24. The subject of Mrs. Meynell's lecture was "Jacobean Lyrists."

The mass meeting which was called for last Wednesday afternoon, March 19, was dismissed for lack of a quorum. The meeting was called as a result of a petition to discuss the honorary scholarships. The petition was signed with nearly a hundred names. It is most unfortunate that a quorum is so difficult to attain for the transaction of student government business. It denotes a lack of interest which is to be deplored.

Wellesley-Vassar Debate.

Vassar College sent two delegates to Wellesley a week ago Saturday to confer with the Wellesley Committee on the arrangement for the debate. The conference was hardly satisfactory to either college. Wellesley gained the point of having three rebuttals, but with the last speech given to the negative, Vassar objected so strenuously to the Harvard coach that it was decided that neither college should have other than its own student coaching. Our committee has, as a result, decided to appoint three regular coaches from the student body and five or six assistants who may be called in at any time to criticize the arguments or the form of the speakers.

Among the responsibilities which fall on the students of all colleges, as well as of our own, is that of patronizing the firms whose advertisements practically support our college magazines and papers.

That many trade elsewhere, when they might with equal satisfaction trade with their own advertisers is undoubtedly true.

This is done in a spirit of thoughtlessness and irresponsibility of course. But when we regard the matter from a purely business point of view, it would seem the logical and honorable thing to do to trade with our own advertisers, as far as we gain satisfaction. Unless the matter is carried out in this way, and understood by each individual to be one of reciprocity between student and advertiser, advertising in college papers is levelled to a charitable act on the part of the advertiser; and to have our papers so supported, is far from the intention of anyone, as well as being incompatible with the dignity of any college paper or magazine. Can we not have co-operation in this matter and make our advertisers feel that there is this co-operation.

The Harvard—Princeton debate comes off on Wednesday evening, March 26, in Saunders Theatre, Cambridge. One hundred of the most desirable seats were reserved for Wellesley students until last Thursday, and many students are planning to be present.

On last Monday night, March 17, Society Tau Zeta Epsilon initiated Miss Ellor E. Carlisle, Miss Ethel D. Puffer and Miss M. Berry Wood, 1902. Following the initiation a banquet in honor of the new initiates and the third birthday of the House was given.

The Barnswallows gave their final entertainment for this term in the Barn on last Saturday night, March 22. The entertainment for the evening was a sheet and pillow case dance.

Miss Marjorie Hemingway and her fiancé, Herr Otto von Pfister, spent the afternoon at college last Friday. Miss Hemingway is to be married in May and will then, in a few weeks, go to Munich, so her visit on Friday was a farewell visit to her Alma Mater.

On last Monday, March 17, Miss Lattchen Galski, the daughter of Mme. Galski, the opera singer, was entertained at Wellesley for luncheon and the afternoon, by Fraulein Müller. In the afternoon, the small guest was entertained at Society Tau Zeta, Epsilon House, with a candy party, her first experience with a chafing dish.

The spring vacation begins at 4.05, on Thursday afternoon, March 27, and ends on Wednesday, April 9th, at 10 o'clock in the morning. On Thursday afternoon, March 27, the hours of the recitations will be as follows: 1.20 to 2.05, 2.15 to 3.00, 3.10 to 3.55.

The hours for registration at the close of the recess are as follows:

4.00 to 6.00, P. M., Tuesday, April 8.
7.30 to 10.00, P. M., Tuesday, April 8.
7.30 to 8.20, A. M., Wednesday, April 9.
8.50 to 10.00, A. M., Wednesday, April 9.

Each student must register for herself. The same rule applies at the end of the Easter vacation as at Christmas time; namely—"A student who registers late at the beginning of any one of the three terms of the college year, for a reason judged inadequate by the Academic Council, will be excluded from examination (or exercise taking the place of an examination) in a full course at the next following examination period, and such deficiency shall be subject to the penalties attached to avoidable absence from examinations."

The legislation in regard to fee of $1.00 for late registration remains unchanged.

NOTES.

On Wednesday evening, March 19, Miss Chase gave a dinner in the private dining-room at the Tea Room. The guests were Miss Jessie Burnham, Miss Mary Fooks, Miss Annis Van Nuys, Miss Eleanor Clark, Miss Clara Moore, Miss Helen Rollins and Miss Ruth Young. After the dinner Miss Chase entertained all the members of Phi Sigma at the Phi Sigma House.

The college students are most enthusiastic over the Grand Opera. At every performance scores of students may be seen, eagerly waiting to go in with the "rush."

The Misses Vail will entertain the Princeton debaters on the afternoon of the Harvard--Princeton debate, at the Tau Zeta Epsilon House. Mr. William Penn Vail is the Chairman of the Intercollegiate Debating Committee.

On Friday evening, March 21, Misses Helen Button, Edith Ball, Helen Jeffries and Laura Gerber, entertained the Philadelphia Club in the room of Miss Helen Button.

David Belasco has purchased a new play for Mrs. Leslie Carter, through Vance Thompson, who came from Paris in the interests of the authors, Eugene Morand, Vance Thompson and Marcel Schwab. The production is set for January or February of next year. As most of us know, Vance Thompson is a brother of Miss Maud Thompson.

The first number of the "Intercollegiate News" was issued a few days ago. It is to be published monthly, to "bring into closer touch the colleges forming the Intercollegiate Amateur Athletic Association of America, and at the same time promote an interest in athletic sports in general." The editor-in-chief is W. B. Dwight, Yale '54, and there is an associate editor from each of the twenty-five colleges which form the I. C. A. A. A. The associate editor from Harvard is L. P. Frothingham '02.

A debate, given by the Alpha Society of Smith College, last week, will be of interest to those who are so strenuously objecting to our new Scholarships. It was resolved, That academic marks should be known by the students. After the debate an informal discussion was held by the whole society and the decision was made in favor of the affirmative side.

The National Suffrage gathering has this year afforded a forum for a diversity of speakers. Prominent among these are Hon. William Dudley Foulke, the new Civil Service Commissioner; Rev. Olympia Brown, the first woman to be ordained by a regularly constituted ecclesiastical body; Hon. James L. Hughes, public school inspector for the city of Toronto, Canada, lecturer and auditor of books on educational subjects; Miss Gail Laughlin, Wellesley, '94, a brilliant young lawyer and orator of New York, who won for Cornell the debate between this university and the University of Pennsylvania; and Mrs. Elizabeth Gilmer, a versatile journalist and humorist.

The Tea Room will be open during the holidays. Board may be had by the day or week.

THE AMERICAN SCHOOL IN PONCE, PORTO RICO.

Miss Frances A. Hall of 1901, who is teaching in the American school at Ponce, Porto Rico, writes interestingly, in the February Wellesley Magazine, of the school conditions there. The American school is planned and conducted on the model of the graded schools in the states, its teachers are Americans, and all the work is done in the English language. In the other schools of the island, the teachers, except those for the English language, are, with a few exceptions, Porto Ricans. The schools are, wherever possible, graded, but the work in general is more elementary than in the corresponding grades in the states. The necessity and good sense of this is seen when one considers the appalling illiteracy of the island. Soon after his arrival, the commissioner of education for the island, Dr. Brunbaugh, established at San Juan a school to provide not only much needed educational facilities for about four hundred children, but to be a type of genuine educational work for other cities on the island. The American school is conducted on practically the same plan, but unlike the Beneficencia, or San Juan school, has no kindergarten department. It comprises eight grades, beginning with the first primary. This brings the work up to the High School point, and boys and girls who have been sent from this school to the states enter High Schools there. There is a teacher for each grade except the two upper ones, which are taught by the principal; and also a special teacher for music and drawing. Of the teachers—all American women, as has been said—the principal is a Smith graduate, and all are college or normal graduates or teachers of excellent experience at home. Until the Americans came, there were no school-houses, properly so-called. The American school building is one of the best on the island. "Perhaps the most essential lesson the children need to be taught," comments Miss Hall, at the close of her account, "is that of respect for law and order; and this it is the object of the American school to instill. The majority of the children come from homes of poverty, immorality, ignorance and disorder, such as one cannot picture till one has seen them. To teach these children the opposite of these things, to teach them the American ideals of life and self-respect, must be the chief aim of education in Porto Rico for some time to come. It is a most hopeful sign that the better class of the people, who have always kept their children in private schools, are realizing the value of the American system; and every month brings applications for entrance to the American school for these children."

MUSIC AT WELLESLEY.

A recent writer on education for women deplores the fact that so large a proportion of time in women's colleges is given to literature, so little to music. Wellesley, indeed, has many and valuable literary courses, but music is by no means neglected. Aside from the technical work in vocal and instrumental music, several delightful courses are offered this year with a view to a general knowledge of music, all counting toward the bachelor's degree. They may be elected by students not taking instrumental or vocal music, and are subject to no separate tuition fee. The first course, that in harmony, covers notation, the study of intervals and scales, the formation and inter-connection of chords, modulation, non-harmonic tones, analysis of harmony in standard works, exercises in harmonizing basses and melodies, and in ear training. This course, which counts three hours a week for the year, is generally pre-requisite to the election of the other branches. The second course takes up counterpoint, in two, three or four voices; also double counterpoint with analysis of examples from standard works. A course in musical form embraces the study of the simple musical sentence and its development into the various instrumental and vocal forms, with an analysis of standard compositions, opportunity for original work being given. Perhaps the most interesting of all is the study of the development of the art of music, a course in the appreciation of music, intended to develop the musical perception and the ability of listening intelligently to music. In this, the second semester's work, will include studies of the most famous composers, their lives and strongest works, their relation to the progress of musical art; and some one of the great oratorios, operas or great instrumental works will be selected for special study, no previous knowledge of music being necessary. Professor Macdougall has charge of all these various courses, as well as of the organ instruction and the training of the college choir, numbering about twenty-four.

The choir fulfils a very high office throughout the year. Under the direction of Professor Macdougall, it adds greatly to the devotional atmosphere, both of morning prayers and Sunday services. It is in fact, the acknowledged aim, both of President Hazard and the choir-master to have music take its place as a part of the worship. Fortnightly, for the past year and a half, vesper services with special music have been arranged for Sunday evenings, with added voices at the Christmas, Easter and commencement vespers.
